

Student Awards 2014 - 2015

PROFILE
2015

- » McCrea 1971: Louisiana's Forgotten Rock Festival, a documentary by Nick Brilleaux and Scott Caro won first place in the “Best Documentary/Public Affairs” category at the 2014 College Broadcasters’ National Student Production Awards. The documentary also won first place in the “Best Documentary/Public Affairs” category at the 2014 College Broadcasters’ National Student Production Awards.
- » Five vocal performance students were finalists at the National Association of Teachers of Singing (NATS). The finalists included Alex Williams, Lauren Gibson, Benjamin Vollentine, Alyssa Hernandez, and Kristina Temple.
- » Amairi Cordova received the 2015 Louisiana Association of Broadcasters scholarship. Cordova was awarded his scholarship at the association’s annual Prestige Awards luncheon in Baton Rouge.
- » Paul Rivera was named Student Broadcaster of the Year by the Louisiana Association of Broadcasters at its 2015 Prestige Awards luncheon in Baton Rouge.
- » Student journalists in the Student Publications Department were honored with the most awards ever in the 2015 Gold Circle Awards for Yearbooks from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association for their work on the university’s 2014 annual “Le Souvenir”.
- » Southeastern counseling student Christianne Ricard, was selected by the NBCC Foundation for the group’s Minority Fellowship Program-Youth.
- » Southeastern students working for the Southeastern Channel won four 2014 Mark of Excellence Awards at the annual Society of Professional Journalists Region 12 conference.
- » Southeastern communication students won awards for the “Best of South” competition at the Southeast Journalism Conference (SEJC).
- » Kaitlyn Morales, a reporter for the Southeastern Channel’s award-winning student newscast Northshore News, was selected from a pool of over 100 applicants for the NBC Nightly Newsummer internship at the network’s Washington, D.C. bureau.
- » Kati Morse, a graduate student and sports reporter, has been chosen by the ESPNU college sports television network as one of its on-camera reporters for ESPNU Campus Connection.