

The University Honors Program

The Honors Program at Southeastern is designed to prepare students to know and understand the most significant ideas, deeds, and events that have shaped our world and will shape the future; to have confidence in their abilities to think independently, write clearly, and speak effectively; and to be leaders in their communities and professions. It aims to prepare responsible individuals to be perpetual learners who realize their potential for a fully human, ethical, and prosperous life.

The Honors experience at Southeastern, as many of our alumni have testified, can make a profound difference in the value and effect of one's undergraduate education by broadening perspectives on the world and strengthening credentials for graduate, law, and medical schools and careers in education, government, business, research, and the health fields.

To provide highly motivated students a strong foundation in liberal education and career preparation, the Program offers sequences of integrated courses. In small classes that average fifteen, students enjoy conditions for learning at the peak of their abilities. Five Honors curriculum options or "paths," distinguished by comprehensive and in-depth coverage of the material in a learning community environment, facilitate discussion, debate, and intellectual friendship among students and with their professors. Rounding out the benefits of honors education at Southeastern are early-priority registration, travel opportunities, extracurricular events and lectures, an honors residence hall, membership in the Honors Student Organization, honors academic credit shown on the transcript, and the option to earn a Sophomore Honors Distinction Award.

Admission Process. A composite score of 21 on the ACT and a 3.0 high school GPA qualify an entering freshman to join; a cumulative GPA of 3.0 in 12 or more hours of university credit qualifies an advanced student to join. Freshman Honors Program students whose GPA at the end of their first semester is between 2.75 and 3.0 are allowed one probation semester in which they must establish a minimum 3.0 cumulative GPA to continue in the Program. Honors active status is not granted automatically but depends on the student's submitting an Application to Join at the Honors Program office, which serves as an advisory center for students pursuing an honors diploma. Each college may have special criteria for accepting students into its upper-division honors curricula. Transfer students, to earn awards, must meet minimum participation requirements in the University Honors Program (UHP).

For advising regarding UHP requirements, a transfer student should meet with the Honors Director.

Honors Courses in the Core University Honors Program Curriculum

The Freshman Honors Seminar. This learning-community experience is centered in two sequences of four honors courses taught by professors recognized for their excellence in the classroom. A constellation of two English (121H and 122H) and two History (101H and 102H) courses, the Freshman Honors Seminar provides an excellent knowledge foundation through study of some of the most influential books written and the major historical events that have shaped Western civilization. In English, students read and discuss the culture-creating epics of Homer, Virgil, Dante, Milton, and selected modern authors. In History, with the aid of primary sources they learn about the intellectual, political, religious, artistic, social, scientific, and technological changes that have made our world possible. Students in all sections of the Seminar read the same books in chronological order, and at times all the different sections meet together for common lectures and activities. This sharing of course material and academic experience helps to create an actual academic community among honors students. They share their ideas beyond the classroom, whether over coffee or in the dorm, and extend their intellectual friendships from semester to semester.

Other Freshman and Sophomore Honors Courses. Students can satisfy some of their basic core curriculum requirements by taking Honors versions of introductory courses in math, biology, physics, economics, interdisciplinary arts, U.S. History, dramatic literature, and modern fiction. Some academic departments also offer lower-division honors courses in majors.

The Ideas in Conflict Sequence. This sequence of four chronologically ordered courses familiarizes students with great books written by thinkers whose ideas have sharpened human understanding of such central issues as the nature of justice, claims of truth, the structure of nature, the meaning of political right and obligation, and the forces of modern social, psychological, and cultural development.

The Senior Thesis. Each senior honors student selects a topic in the major and plans a research project to carry out with the supervision of a faculty advisor.

Honors in the Major

Each of the University's colleges of Arts and Sciences, Business and Technology, Education and Human Development, and Nursing and Health Sciences offers upper-division honors curricula beyond the foundational courses in the University Honors Program. These upper-division curricula (shown in Path One, Path Three, and Path Five in the chart following) allow students to earn an honors diploma in a major or discipline at graduation. After meeting a standard of participation in the UHP to qualify for promotion to an honors curriculum in a major or discipline, students take advanced honors courses designed especially to enhance their preparedness for success in their professions and careers. Note 1: When the separate colleges grant diplomas to students who complete upper-division honors curricula, a college will recognize achievement in a "discipline" or in the college:

Examples:	Honors Diploma in Business	Honors Diploma in Nursing
	Honors Diploma in Technology	Honors Diploma in the Health Sciences
	Honors Diploma in Education	Honors Diploma in Political Science
	Honors Diploma in Social Studies	Honors Diploma in Arts and Sciences

Note 2: Students satisfy this requirement by taking regular (non-Honors) courses in foreign language. In degree programs with no free electives the academic dean has the discretion to substitute a 3-hour H-option course in the major for 3 hours of the foreign language requirement.
